A

We created this toolkit for you to feel empowered to make your own changes to St. Louis City's budget. It's the people's money and we get to decide what to do with it!

Pages 2-3 explain who we are, what our mission is, and our demands.

B

Learn about St. Louis City's budgeting process, the City's current budget priorities, and how the General Fund is being allocated in Fiscal Year 2024 (pages 4-5).

C

Learn how St. Louis City's exorbitant spending on policing comes at the expense of real public safety (pages 6-7).

D

Bring this toolkit to meetings with elected leaders and policy makers, and/or use it as a guide to express your budget priorities to local leaders via phone, email, and social media.

Page 9 outlines ways you can take action.

E

Share with friends, family, strangers! Spread the word about real public safety solutions that promote community stability, wellness, and thriving.

Defund. Re-Envision. Transform.

Defund. Re-Envision. Transform. (DRT) is a grassroots campaign anchored by Action St. Louis, ArchCity Defenders, the Coalition Against Police Crimes and Repression, Forward Through Ferguson, and Freedom Community Center.

Mission and Vision

Defund the prison industrial complex

We must divest from institutions that harm, surveil, and kill our communities, and reallocate funds into programs that promote public safety and wellbeing: housing, education, medical and mental healthcare, youth programs, employment opportunities, transportation, and more.

Re-envision our approach to public safety

Instead of spending hundreds of millions of dollars each year on the failed “arrest and incarcerate” model of policing, we must begin reducing the role of police and develop public safety systems that address the root causes of harm and violence.

Transform our responses to crisis and harm

We must transform public safety from systems that criminalize and punish after harm has occurred, and adopt community-based responses that intervene, mediate, and prevent harm. We do this by civilianizing units of the criminal legal system and investing in programs equipped with the resources to handle social challenges.

1

We demand our city defund the most obvious sources of waste and abuse in the police department, including St. Louis Metropolitan Police Department (SLMPD) overtime and vacant positions, Special Weapons and Tactics (SWAT), ShotSpotter, and the Real Time Crime Center.

2

We demand our city re-envision public safety by developing nonpolice and civilian alternatives to police that are accountable and responsive to the needs of all St. Louisans.

3

We demand the transformation of St. Louis through community-based methods of preventing and responding to harm; divestment from institutions that surveil, incarcerate, and kill Black & brown communities; and investment into the people.

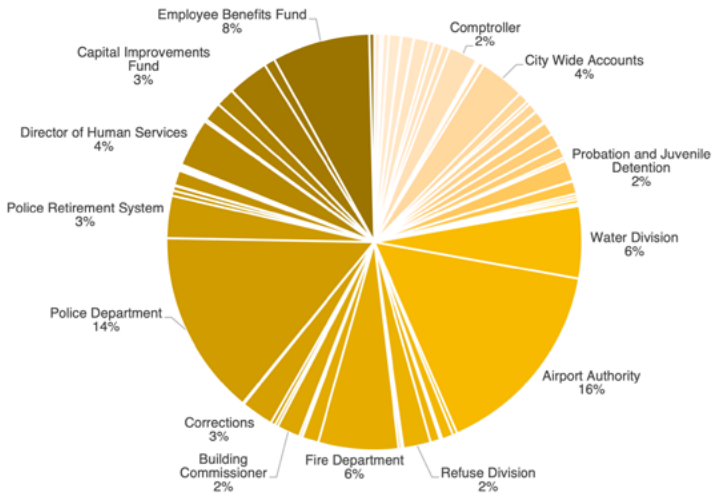

Background

The City of St. Louis creates a budget for each fiscal year (FY), July 1 to June 30. The City has budgeted about $1.32 billion for the Fiscal Year 2024 (July 1, 2023 to June 30, 2024).¹

The budget is called the “Annual Operating Plan.” It is a document that (1) sets policy; (2) identifies new initiatives; and (3) allocates the resources necessary to maintain City services and meet the mayoral administration’s objectives for that fiscal year.

In FY24, the Police Department is currently allocated the most money of any other department: $189.8M (14%) or $233.2M (18% when including the Police Pension Fund).²

City of St. Louis Full Budget Allocation by Department (FY24)

Taxpayers mainly contribute to the General Fund (GF) portion of the City’s budget. This is the main operating fund of the City, from which most city services are funded. Budgeted at about $566.8M for FY24, the General Fund is the largest of the City’s funding units.¹

The FY24 budget proposes to spend $164.4M from the General Fund (29% of the fund) on the police department and police retirement.

An additional $5.3M is allocated for the city counselor police unit.²

This brings the total proposed general fund spending on police to about $170M or just about 30% of the City’s General Fund.

In contrast, the proposed FY24 General Fund budget includes about $1.8M for Human Services (about 0.3% of the General Fund budget).²

Another way to look at it is that for every $1 the city budgeted to spend from the general fund on police in FY24, they budgeted less than a penny on Human Services.

WHY DEFUND THE POLICE?

A

Police don't keep us safe.

When proposing divestment from police, the loudest response is always: “What about violent crime?” The reality is, most police officers only make one felony arrest per year.

The New York Times and multiple studies have shown that the proportion of time officers spend responding to incidents classified as violent crime is between 2% and 6%. The other 94-98% is made up of nonviolent or noncriminal incidents, traffic, passive downtime, and paperwork.³

We are over-relying on systems that DO NOT prevent the most violent of crimes and spend less than 10% of their time responding to it.

In addition, the City of St. Louis leads all major metropolitan police departments across the nation in most killings by police officer per capita.⁴

Social problems are not police problems.

If all you have is a hammer, everything looks like a nail. An entity trained and authorized to use force should NOT be the primary approach to addressing mental health crises, homelessness, drug use, and other social challenges.

Exorbitant spending on policing comes at a human cost.

The St. Louis General Fund budget allocates approximately $566.8M to police, and only $1.8M to Human Services, the purpose of which is to “enhance the quality of life of citizens through the provision of social service programs,” and to “promote City living and neighborhood stabilization through the preservation of affordable and accessible housing.”⁵

The excessive cost of over-policing leaves critical public safety systems underfunded, such as affordable housing, public education, physical and mental healthcare, youth programs, violence prevention programs, etc.

This plays out in predictable ways on the ground, leaving our city’s highest policed neighborhoods with the least amount of resources.

Under these conditions, marginalized people are punished, but don’t receive support. Black St. Louisans are 3x more likely to live in poverty and 5x more likely to experience unemployment than the rest of the population.⁶

The budget should be used to invest in people and communities, not for building up systems that surveil and harm us.

Reform is not enough.

Following the high-profile murders of Mike Brown, Eric Garner, George Floyd, Breonna Taylor, and more, we have seen reform after reform. None have changed the overwhelming rates of abuse and violence, and 2022 saw the highest number of police killings on record.⁷

For decades, cities have attempted to reform police through increased accountability, diversity, and training. Because they did not question the role of the police, these reforms simply expanded police power, instead of reducing police abuse.

To live in a safer community without police will require a multi-pronged investment and policy change approach. We must demand divestment from wasteful spending on SLMPD and investment into our communities and programs that actually keep us safe. This includes: creating alternatives to calling the police for mental health needs; equitable access to the public resources; investing in proven-effective programs that communities are already relying on for nonpolice intervention and violence prevention; and decriminalizing unmet mental health needs, sex work, and drug use.

When we pool our resources and make our voices heard, anything is possible. Join us in transforming our city into a safe and abundant community, where we can all thrive.
